Cobbles

Cobbles

These products are rough looking but rugged in performance to offer the landscaper an alternative clay product to aid his design. Its small scale makes it ideal for patterns or curves. Like all our products it weathers fast and looks old from the moment it is laid.

The picture also shows the upright garden edgings which are an ideal feature with which to border the area on which the cobbles are used be it a path, a patio or just a feature in your garden.

Size: 100 x 100 x 65mm.

Brick Pavers

The walled garden at Scampston Hall in North Yorkshire has been completely restored from an original Capability Brown project which had become derelict over many years. This has now been completely restored using a modern design by Piet Oudolf. The paths and details form a contrast to the soft landscape in this 4½ acre garden. The pavers were chosen for their rugged, weathered look in competition with many other products.

This landscape was installed during the restoration of a kitchen garden part of a period country house in the Isle of Wight. It was designed by Philippa Lambert who has blended the hard and soft landscape perfectly in this picture.

Brick in the Garden

This picture is included in our brochure to illustrate how well genuine handmade bricks enhance an English country garden. On the right hand side of the picture in the forefront you can see a pergola built out of cant bricks, just another example of versatility and imaginative design. Brick in the garden complements the soft landscape like no other and immediately looks comfortable in its setting.

The flowerpot in the foreground is also made from the Lacustrine clay from which all York Handmade products are manufactured.

Garden Walls

The walled garden at Scampston Hall, near Scarborough, Yorkshire is featured on another page. We are using the same scheme to illustrate how well the bricks are detailed and laid by good craftsmen to make the ideal backcloth for any garden or hard landscape.

Featured in this picture are 50mm (2") and we would draw attention of the reader to the excellent pointing and detailing in the wall.

Always remember that the choice of joint and mortar colour is a critical part of any successful brickwork scheme.

Chelsea 2007

These bricks were supplied to one of the gold award winning projects at the 2007 Show. The scheme designed by Adam Frost was entitled "Realistic Retreat" and was designed for an urban landscape where space was limited. The idea is to give the urban dweller a sense of tranquillity.

Bricks and other landscape products can be used equally well in an urban garden as in a country situation.

This keystone, from which the arch bricks are offset, provides an attractive but simple to build feature on the house. The arch is designed to course with 65mm bricks.
